I am wondering who is responsible for the cell phone re-porting debacle. Carriers say that the FCC required release of the option before the software required was adequately developed. Who was responsible for the software development? Or is the problem really just volume?
Thank you